This is a good point from which to start discussion. The next thing you need to do is to articulate two or three specific activities in which the user can have this experience.

To start with I suggest (but please feel free to think of others):

Something having to do with TV content discovery (Ultimate Media)

A game (but it has to go a lot farther than what Chris Schmandt's students have already done with games involving wearable devices)

A new way of remotely experiencing Tidmarsh
